

ABSTRACT

According to at least one embodiment, a system comprises a first device arranged on a circuit board. The system further comprises a programmable capture device arranged on the circuit board, wherein at least one input pin of the programmable capture device is communicatively coupled to at least one signal pin of the first device such that the programmable capture device captures at least one signal from the first device during testing of the first device.